SHOPPING SEASON BEGINS

1 Black Friday has been regarded as the beginning of the Christmas shopping season, and most major retailers open very early and offer promotional sales. Many nonretail employees and schools have both Thanksgiving and the following Friday off, which makes it a four-day weekend, thereby increasing the number of potential shoppers. METRO

RETAIL CYBERSECURITY

2 U.S. retailers are hunting for evidence of breaches leading into the holiday shopping season after a cyberintelligence firm privately warned them about payment-card-stealing malware that it said evades almost all security software. "This is by far the most sophisticated point-of-sale malware seen to date," said Maria Noboa, lead technical analyst for privately held iSight Partners, which uncovered the malware and was due to release a technical report about it Tuesday. REUTERS

SHOPPERS FAVOR AMAZON

3 A majority of U.S. consumers plan to go to Amazon.com for most of their online holiday shopping, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll, even after traditional retailers have tried to capture Web demand. The survey found that 51 percent plan to do most of their online shopping at Amazon this holiday season. REUTERS

MACY'S HOLIDAY SEASON

7 Macy's stores opened in the U.S. on Thanksgiving for the first time in 2013. The name of the company, which has sponsored New York's Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade since 1924, is virtually synonymous with the holiday.

FATAL STAMPEDE

4 In 2008, a temporary Wal-Mart employee was trampled to death in a rush of thousands of early morning shoppers as he and other employees attempted to unlock the doors of a Long Island, New York, store at 5 a.m. The employee was "stepped on by hundreds of people" as other workers attempted to fight their way through the crowd. METRO

2015 TO EXCEED 2014

2 John Lewis, Britain's largest department store group by sales, has predicted this year's Black Friday promotional event will be even bigger than 2014's, having said in January it might rein in its participation. Last year's Black Friday delivered John Lewis' most lucrative week in its 150-year-history. However, the employee-owned firm's managing director, Andy Street, said the late November discounting day imported from the United States disrupted traditional Christmas sales patterns and may have to be tempered in 2015. REUTERS

WAL-MART GOES 'DEEP'

6 Wal-Mart says it boosted its holiday inventory for electronics, toys and other potentially popular products, betting that the promise of being in-stock will attract customers during this crucial time. Wal-Mart could use the boost: Margins have come under pressure because of costs related to entry-level wages. REUTERS

Help Metro make magic

Please donate to the Metro Magic annual holiday toy drive during the 2015 holiday season.

In keeping with the holiday spirit of giving, Metro is once again launching Tony's Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

This year marks the seventh anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory of the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief. Mr. Metcalf passed away in 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

Mr. Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts. It is our goal to keep that magic alive. We are now asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic.

Metro has created a wish list at the Target website that readers can access by going to www.metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic logo.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Target's secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices in each city. This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

Record sales on Cyber Monday?

A report says millennials are most excited about shopping on the first Monday after Thanksgiving.

CHESTER SORIA
@chestersoria
chester.soria@metro.us

By the time office refrigerators are jammed with turkey and stuffing leftovers from the Thursday before, analysts expect online shopping will be in full swing come the Monday after the Thanksgiving holiday.

Digital marketing firm Adobe predicted earlier this year that Cyber Monday retailers will bring in $3 billion for the first time ever.

Last year, consumers spent more than $2 billion in desktop online spending, according to digital analytics company comScore, which has tracked online shopping since before the phrase "Cyber Monday" was even coined in 2005.

"While Black Friday and Thanksgiving are expected to have well-above-average growth rates this year, we're still predicting Cyber Monday to be the heaviest online spending day in history for the sixth straight year," comScore analyst Adam Lella told Metro.

A decade ago, retailers reported some $484 billion in sales on the Monday after Thanksgiving.

In a recent survey by the NRF, 79.6 percent of the 7,172 people it polled nationwide said they would or may shop on Cyber Monday.

Millennials in particular were excited about Cyber Monday. The same survey found more than 88 percent of respondents between 18 and 24 years old and more than 90 percent between the ages of 25 and 34 plan on pulling out the credit cards and laptops on Monday.

But even with the increased relevance of Cyber Monday over the last few years, online shopping traditionally held for after Thanksgiving is starting earlier: Wal-Mart, the world's largest retailer, announced it would preempt Cyber Monday with discounted shopping by Sunday.

"We expect retailers will offer exclusive savings each day of the big weekend, including Thanksgiving and Black Friday-only deals and even extended Cyber Monday promotions throughout the week that follows," said Matthew Shay, president of the National Retail Federation, in a statement.

Still, Lella of comScore said that extended shopping days shouldn't deter online shoppers come Monday, since weekends tend to perform weaker than the post-Thanksgiving work week days.

"So even if the weekend does see greater growth than in past years, it likely won't be enough to meaningfully affect Cyber Monday's sales," he said.

LIC Flea launches holiday market

The Queens Holiday Market will run for four weekends starting Nov. 28.

Shopping doesn't end on Black Friday.

The LIC Flea & Food, a summer fixture at the Queens waterfront, is taking it indoors for four consecutive weekends with the launch of the Queens Holiday Market tomorrow.

The market will be held at The Shops at Atlas Park on Cooper Avenue in Glendale and will run each weekend from Nov. 28 through Dec. 20.

Many of the regular Flea vendors will be there as well as several new vendors with the holiday spirit in mind, the company said in a press release.

There will be more than 70 vendors at the market selling food, jewelry, fashion, antiques, collectibles and more, the company said.

Live music at the market TWITTER

"The Queens Holiday Market will be an opportunity to find one-of-a-kind gifts you won't be able to find anywhere else from vendors who make and curate unique items as well as enjoy a diverse group of food vendors, drinks and entertainment in a huge 25,000-square-foot venue," said market president Joshua Schneps.

The market was welcomed by local leaders.

"The holiday season is a great time of year to spend with family and friends, while also enjoying events within our community," said state Sen. Joseph Addabbo Jr. "I look forward to taking my family to this winter event that should be enjoyed by all."

Wal-Mart makes Sunday the new Cyber Monday

Record industry sales are expected.

Wal-Mart has decided that Cyber Monday, the biggest online shopping day of the year, should not start on a Monday anymore.

The world's largest retailer by revenue will, for the first time this year, launch all its Cyber Monday deals on the Sunday after Thanksgiving rather than the early hours of Monday morning as in previous years.

Cyber Monday's origins trace back more than a decade when people started using the high-speed Internet access at their workplaces to purchase things they saw but did not buy during trips to the shopping mall over the weekend after Thanksgiving, which falls on the fourth Thursday in November.

Now, with Internet access readily available, the logic of limiting the event to a weekday no longer holds, said Fernando Madeira, chief executive of Walmart.com.

"The customers have changed but Cyber Monday hasn't changed with them," Madeira told Reuters. "Now everyone has Internet."

"The customers have changed but Cyber Monday hasn't changed with them. Now everyone has Internet."

Madeira

promotions the day before. It will launch 2,000 online-only specials on Sunday at 8 p.m. Eastern time, up from 500 such deals last year. The move shows how retailers are looking to stretch what were once single-day shopping events in a bid to capture demand. A number of retailers are promoting deals for "Black Friday" — the day after Thanksgiving and traditionally one of the busiest shopping days — weeks in advance.

The early Cyber Monday start also comes as retailers wage a bruising battle for online demand with Amazon.com, which is several times larger than Wal-Mart in e-commerce sales and is growing at a faster rate.

Industry-wide Cyber Monday sales in the U.S. will likely reach $3 billion for the first time in 2015, up 12 percent from last year, according to projections by Adobe. While Cyber Monday is expected to remain the biggest single day in terms of online revenue, Black Friday is expected to close the gap, with sales expected to rise 15 percent to $2.7 billion, Adobe said.

Spend Black Friday outside shopping lines in the city

NYC & Company suggests New Yorkers and tourists hit the town following the Thanksgiving holiday.

CHESTER SORIA
@chestersoria
chester.soria@metro.us

New Yorkers looking to walk off their turkey dinner hangovers have their pick of activities following Thanksgiving that have nothing to do with shopping.

For those souls not brave enough to hit up Rockefeller Center, Bryant Park's ice skating rink or SoHo's stores, the holiday weekend might be the perfect time to head to the outer boroughs, said Chris Heywood of NYC & Company, the city's tourism agency.

"See your city," Heywood said. "We have a captive audience of 8 million New Yorkers. If they travel to another borough, they are sure to find such a rewarding experience."

For folks looking to avoid shopping lines entirely, Heywood suggested a visit to the New York Botanical Garden's Holiday Train Show, where model trains travel through 150 miniaturized city landmarks made from natural materials inside the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory. Tickets are $20.

A quick jaunt south will take you to Bronx's Little Italy on Arthur Avenue, where passersby can pick up a pizza slice or their preferred seasonal confection as the 3 p.m., including a "Bird Nerds Game Hour" and a hangout with animals during their lunch hour, during which participants can help feed the creatures.

Manhattanites have plenty of options, though, including the annual presentation of the Metropolitan Museum of Art's Christmas tree and 18th-century Neapolitan nativity scene.

Admission is $25. To really get their money's worth, Heywood recommended visitors stop by the Jacqueline de Ribes "Art of Style" exhibit at the Costume Institute while they're there.

Stragglers looking for a more 21-and-up event in Manhattan can spend Friday evening at the Miracle on Ninth Street pop-up bar at 649 E. 9th St. for Christmas- and Hanukkah-themed cocktails at a base $14 a drink.

With sweater weather sticking around another weekend, Heywood said New Yorkers should take advantage of city parks and waterfronts while they can.

"There's a lot of culture here throughout all five boroughs," he said.

"There's a lot of culture here throughout all five boroughs."

Heywood

neighborhood gears up for its Christmas tree lighting next week.

New Yorkers and tourists looking to stay in the holiday spirit can head over to New York Hall of Science in Queens for the world's largest gingerbread village, otherwise known as Gingerbread Lane — a staple for 22 years. Tickets start at $12.

Meanwhile, the Prospect Park Alliance has a series of events scheduled at the Audubon Center from 12 p.m. to

The midseason finale of "The Walking Dead" airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on AMC. GENE PAGE/AMC

THE FUN STARTS HERE

We prepare for the worst for Sunday's "Walking Dead" finale.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

We were all probably thinking the same thing at the close of last week's nerve-rattling episode of "The Walking Dead," when a chunk of Alexandria's wall opened up to a massive horde of walkers: This can't possibly end well. With only one episode left before the midseason break, it probably won't.

(Obviously, spoiler warnings for anyone not caught up, but the good news is AMC wouldn't let us watch Sunday's episode early, so we're as in the dark as you are.) This episode, "Start to Finish," hits Alexandria with a threat that "might be too big to defeat." That's putting it mildly. The hit series returns February 14, but let's look at who may or may not still be there when it does.

Glenn:

It's been a roller coaster of emotions for Glenn (Steven Yeun) fans this season, after that horrific fake-out of him being torn to shreds by walkers, followed by weeks of waiting to confirm he was OK. Now he and Enid (Katelyn Nacon) are stuck outside the wall — and poised to help out their friends in some heroic fashion. But hopefully not too heroic.

Carl:

While there might be plenty of fans out there who are sick of teenage Carl (Chandler Riggs) always making it through while more well-liked characters die off, we're really hoping this isn't how he bites it — from a bullet shot by another obnoxious teenager (Austin Abrams). Kids, come on. It's a zombie apocalypse. We don't have time for these sorts of lesser-cable-show shenanigans.

Morgan:

OK, we'll just say it: We're really worried about Morgan (Lennie James). A lot of this season has been devoted to his spiritual reawakening and new devotion to nonlethal force. Hell, he even got his own supersized flashback episode. And his philosophy has been challenged by Rick (Andrew Lincoln) and Michonne (Danai Gurira), and he's harboring a psychopathic prisoner in his basement. The algebra on this one does not look good for him, except for one important variable: Morgan is a total badass.

Alexandria itself:

This season has been pretty liberal with the body count among Alexandria's underprepared and untrained residents. During the attack by the Wolves a couple episodes in, we actually lost count of how many of them died after 12 or 13. And on that big, bold mission that kicked off the season — to clear the quarry of a massive horde of walkers — it seemed the only casualties were newcomers to the show. We're going to assume that "The Walking Dead" will continue to use the Alexandrians as zombie fodder in favor of our more long-standing heroes — as long as Dr. Denise (Merritt Wever) survives, because she's awesome.

So, place your bets and strap in for what's sure to be a bumpy ride Sunday night. As fans of the comics know, whatever happens in Alexandria by the end of this episode, something much more sinister is on its way.

Ranking the 'Rocky' flicks

How does "Creed," the continuation/spinoff in a nearly 40-year franchise, stack up against the rest? And how bad is "Rocky V," really? We break things down. MATT PRIGGE

1. "ROCKY" (1976)

Along with "Jaws" the year prior and "Star Wars" the year after, the first "Rocky" is often credited with helping break the gritty, downer streak that had come to somewhat (if by no means entirely) dominate Hollywood in the '70s. But it's still pretty downer and gritty, and it doesn't end with our palooka hero even winning. Sylvester Stallone's Rocky really has his hills and valleys before he hits the mountaintop. Also often neglected: Stallone's performance, which is so lived-in, so lively, so genuinely lovable that it's easy to take for granted.

2. "CREED" (2015)

The first movie to feature Stallone's Rocky without being written by Stallone, "Creed" is technically fan-fiction, courtesy of "Fruitvale Station" maker Ryan Coogler. But it balances honoring the classics with being its own thing.

Michael B. Jordan's Adonis — the aspiring-pugilist son of dead-and-gone Rocky rival-bud Apollo Creed (Carl Weathers) — may be the lead, but Rocky doesn't just pass the torch. Even after four decades, Stallone is able to find new notes inside a character who has gone from Rocky from the block to a superstar who, in "Rocky IV," fixed the Cold War, to a guy who's back on the block, mourning the many loved ones who've passed.

3. "ROCKY III" (1982)

The sequels turned increasingly silly and outsized, to match a star who himself turned silly and outsized. The third is at least deeply entertaining, in part because it has a villain — Mr. T's Clubber Lang — whose personality is so big and charismatic he threatens to hijack the entire franchise. But Stallone remains in control, and even, by this one, became a good director, helping bring MTV styles to the movies.

4. "ROCKY BALBOA" (2006)

The 1990s and early 2000s were tough for Stallone, and you could cynically say he was just being cynical when he dusted Rocky (and then Rambo) off. But he took Balboa's return seriously, in part because he wanted to give a noble sendoff to a character who'd gone out like a chump in "Rocky V." "Rocky Balboa" is at times sleepy and old-fashioned, even spotty, but also deeply felt.

5. "ROCKY II" (1979)

In the first "Rocky," Balboa felt so vivid it would have been a shame to let him go. But they couldn't just do more of the same. Though technically "Rocky II" is a rematch movie, pitting him back against Weathers' Apollo, it also seriously considers what would happen to a Regular Joe like Rocky after a freak break-through. After an initial flush of fame and money, he winds up forgotten, having to work his way back up in a way that is quite different from what he went through the last round.

6. "ROCKY IV" (1985)

The same year Stallone had Rocky fight the evil Soviets, he sent Rambo, in his second adventure, back to re-win Vietnam. It was peak Reagan for the actor/filmmaker, and "Rocky IV" feels especially ridiculous. Half the movie is montages, and there's also a robot. It's the perfect sign of how much America had changed in the last decade, from grimy and depressing in the '70s to out of its mind in the '80s.

7. "ROCKY V" (1990)

Though far more down-to-earth than its "America, F— Yeah" predecessor, the fifth only showed you can't return home. (At least until 2006's "Rocky Balboa.") And yet Stallone has Rocky literally return home, abruptly losing all of his riches and returning to his old haunts to start anew, this time as a mentor to a kid (Tommy Morrison) who proves easily corruptible. It means well but fumbles anyway, notably with a ghostly pow-wow with deceased trainer Mickey (Burgess Meredith) and a climactic street fight peppered with cheesy black-and-white flashbacks.

Expert tips for doing Black Friday right

BeFrugal.com CEO Jon Lal shares his strategies for winning big in the bargain blitz.

AMANDA VALENTOVIC
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

There is only one thing that gets people more excited than turkey and stuffing around the end of November, and that's Black Friday. BeFrugal.com CEO Jon Lal gives us advice on tackling the biggest shopping day of the year with the smallest amount of stress. Read on for his suggestions.

Get organized

Know what you want and where to get it. "It's worth organizing things you really, really want on a separate list," advises Lal. He recommends keeping track of what specific brands and models you are shopping for, as well as your budget for each item. This will save you time when things are flying off of shelves. Another tip: "Remember that you're fighting against a limited supply," says the expert. So start early and prioritize.

Stay connected

Lal says that if specific brands and model types are important to you, it's good to pay attention to retailers on social media. "Get on their email newsletter lists and follow them on Facebook and Twitter," Lal says. "You want to be plugged into the stores."

Watch for electronic deals

Though products vary every year, electronic items like phones, computers and tablets are popular on Black Friday. "They tend to run out the quickest," Lal says. His tip: Keep an eye out for early specials because electronics often go on sale before Friday.

Watch out for impulse buys

Even when you have a plan and a budget, there are always those items you buy on a whim that can become your budget's downfall. Being in a store is more tempting and more attractive than shopping online, says Lal. Stick to the items on your list to avoid overspending. "Stores know you'll do more shopping," he says. "They have everything set up [strategically] so you might buy a bunch of other stuff."

3 things to watch for as Giants tackle Redskins in Washington

The G-Men get back to work Sunday against an old foe.

sports@metro.us

The Giants may have entered their bye weekend on a low point following their last-second defeat to the Patriots, but they enter Week 12 still in first place in the NFC East, and are coming off a weekend in which they won without even playing a game. Thanks to the ineptness of the Redskins (4-6) and the Eagles (4-6), New York (5-5) still controls its own destiny. Metro takes a look at the key storylines as Big Blue looks for a season sweep of the 'Skins:

1 PRINCE BACK IN KINGDOM

The Giants have dealt with a plethora of injuries this season, but the loss of cornerback Prince Amukamara for a couple of weeks may have been the most damning.

Amukamara, who is returning from a pectoral malady, would've been a huge difference maker in last week's one-point loss to New England, especially on the fatal final drive when the Giants allowed Danny Amendola to convert on 4th-and-10 to extend the possession and get the Patriots within field goal range.

Barring a setback during practices this week, Big Blue will get their Prince back, and he'll likely draw the task of covering Washington's big-play wideout, DeSean Jackson. The speedy receiver is a familiar foe from his Eagles' days, and also a proud Giant killer, but Amukamara said he gladly accepts the challenge. "I feel 100 percent.

I'm ready to return," said Amukamara, adding the battle with Jackson will be fierce. "He's freakishly fast. But I've played against him the last five years and I know what to expect."

2 FAMILIAR FACE

Hakeem Nicks was signed during the team's bye week, and while he may not be the same player who helped the franchise win the Super Bowl four seasons ago, he knows the surroundings and knows the quarterback. Nicks, 27, is still young by real-life standards, but his body has taken a beating over the years. His medical file is extensive, yet head coach Tom Coughlin said he's very confident that Nicks has plenty still to offer.

"To be honest with you, I don't think there's even a question about that part of it [being an immediate contributor]. He is a young man and he does miss it, and he has worked very hard to stay in shape and be ready," said Coughlin, adding he believes the veteran can still be a downfield threat. "I'm hoping that's exactly what [he] will be."

3 FINISH STRONG

This has been the phrase of the season for the Giants, as Coughlin has been trying earnestly to get his team to take heed. Unfortunately, it hasn't worked for a team that has mastered the art of the close defeat. Four of the Giants' five losses have been by a total of nine points. As Beckham lamented this week, there's "no reason why we couldn't have been 9-1 or 10-0."

Alas, there is a reason, and that's due to a sense of complacency when leading in the fourth quarter, and a lack of attention to detail when they have that lead in the waning moments. Coughlin certainly hopes lessons were learned during the bye week, and that his team is ready to show that killer instinct in Washington.

Big Blue has yet to put forth a complete game, but they are still the best team in the division, with an elite, clutch quarterback who knows what it takes. The team's overall play has been getting better in the last few weeks, so now's a good time to really put the hammer down on a Washington team that has been known to fold once a team gets on top of them early. Start fast and finish strong will be the key to a Giants' win.

NFL

Jets facing something close to a 'must-win'

Losers of four of their last five games, the Jets need to right this ship soon or else that playoff dream from October is gone.

Against the Miami Dolphins Sunday (1 p.m., CBS), they face a team that they should beat (and a team they have beaten already once this season). Problem is, that the Week 4 win seems like a distant memory. The Jets are a much different team on both sides of the football than the team that clobbered Miami in early October.

Is the magic gone?

Ryan Fitzpatrick was once the golden boy of this team, but as is the case when any team falls on hard times, it is the quarterback who takes the vast amount of blame. In the Jets' five losses this year, he has thrown seven of his 11 interceptions (and in the loss at the Raiders he threw just five passes before injuring his left thumb). When Fitzpatrick can limit mistakes, this Jets team can win. But since that thumb injury, the offense has been in a downward spiral.

Getting the rush going

When under pressure, Dolphins quarterback Ryan Tannehill has been prone to major mistakes and costly turnovers. This should be an advantage for the Jets, one would think, especially with the names they have in their pass rush. But the Jets managed just one sack last week in the loss at the Texans. If they can't get to the quarterback, and given their injuries in the secondary, this could be a long day for the Jets.

Playoff implications

Around Thanksgiving time, the playoff picture becomes a little less muddled and that holds true this year. Outside of the top four teams in each division, the Jets are just mediocre enough to be firmly in the mix for the wild card. A win on Sunday would elevate them to 6-5 and would lower the Dolphins to 4-7, essentially putting Miami on the brink. A win would help the Jets and essentially eliminate another team. This is an important game to get. KRISTIAN DYER

Steelers, Giants should cruise in Week 12 action

Don't fear the road teams when making your Week 12 NFL picks.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

There could be upsets galore as the NFL's postseason push begins. Here's a look at the best bets around the league for week 12:

Pittsburgh Steelers at Seattle Seahawks (-4.5)

Once again the Seahawks are sizable favorites based on reputation rather than what they've done on the field this year. Pittsburgh's 5th-ranked run-stoppers should be able to shut down the Seahawks' potent running game, and that will force Russell Wilson to drop back behind an offensive line that's allowed him to be hit in the backfield a league-high 76 times this season, including 35 sacks. D'Angelo Williams and the Steelers can run the ball with the best of them, so Seattle won't be able to cheat up against Ben Roethlisberger's favorite target, Antonio Brown. The Steelers look like a solid underdog selection. The pick: Steelers +4.5

New York Giants (-2) at Washington Redskins

The Giants have won five straight against the Redskins (covering the spread each time) and are in a good position to extend that streak to six. "Big Blue" comes into this game fresh off their bye week, which is bad news for Washington as the Giants have won six of their last seven games off a bye. This game projects to be a shootout and the Giants are better equipped to handle that, as they've scored at least 26 points in four straight games.

Eli Manning's offense should be able to outperform Kirk Cousins and company and maintain control in the NFC East. The pick: Giants -2

Minnesota Vikings at Atlanta Falcons (-2)

The Vikings suffered a discouraging loss to the Packers last Sunday, but no one has been falling faster than the Falcons, who have lost four of their last five games (all as favorites) and are 0-5 ATS in that span. Matt Ryan will face heavy resistance from Minnesota's 6th-ranked pass defense, and he may not have a healthy Davonta Freeman to keep the Vikings honest, as Freeman suffered a concussion on a helmet-to-helmet hit in the second quarter against the Colts last Sunday. Expect the Vikings to scratch out a win in a close, low-scoring tilt. The pick: Vikings +2

The best of the rest

Our picks in the rest of this week's games (picks are in bold):

- Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Indianapolis Colts (-3)
- St. Louis Rams at Cincinnati Bengals (-9)
- Miami Dolphins at New York Jets (-3.5)
- San Diego Chargers at Jacksonville Jaguars (-4)
- Oakland Raiders (-2) at Tennessee Titans
- New Orleans Saints at Houston Texans (-3)
- Buffalo Bills at Kansas City Chiefs (-3.5)
- Arizona Cardinals (-10.5) at San Francisco 49ers
- New England Patriots (-3.5) at Denver Broncos
- Baltimore Ravens at Cleveland Browns (-2.5)

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries It's a good day to spend some quiet time reflecting on past dreams. Unplug, unwind and write down the things you have accomplished.

Taurus Remain cool. Expect obstacles and prepare to bypass them. Don't give in to frustration, depression or self-doubt.

Gemini Focus on completing tasks that you have been reluctant to finish. Taking on more when you are already overdoing it will be costly.

Cancer A seminar will motivate you to begin a new project. Be fair in your personal relationships. Ensure that you are not burdening your loved ones.

Leo You will receive an enticing proposal, but do your homework. An impulsive leap to a new position will not bring the results you want.

Virgo Don't expect everyone to favor your ideas. If you have your heart set on a certain activity or project, prepare to move forward on your own.

Libra An eye for detail and meticulous record keeping will ensure that all of your personal papers are in tip-top shape.

Scorpio Invest in yourself. Jumping into a fast-cash scheme will end badly. Focus on education, apprenticeships and raising your qualifications and awareness.

Sagittarius Don't underestimate the power of your opinion. Make the most of any group situations to initiate productive networking.

Capricorn Instead of looking after everyone else, you should engage in some personal pampering. A short visit to a spa, will help free your mind.

Aquarius Participating in a cause close to your heart will give you the chance to make compatible and interesting contacts.

Pisces Be sure to evaluate the total cost before taking on any home renovations. Leave some funds available for an unexpected expense. EUGENIA LAST
